

HANDS ALONG THE NILE

2004 ANNUAL REPORT

Dear Friends of HANDS,

Sitting on the porch of Bob's home in Chautauqua, New York after a fruitful board meeting, we reflect on the past year. The lush green trees and flowering geraniums surrounding us seem a world away from the bustling streets of Cairo and the dusty lanes of Egyptian villages that we visited just a few months ago.

These trips to Egypt are an inspiring reminder of why HANDS exists: to build partnerships between Americans and Egyptians, both to increase cross-cultural understanding and to support local community development efforts. On our last trip, we met a young widow, raising five children, whose house HANDS had been privileged to help rebuild. We stopped by a classroom full of young girls attending a life-skills workshop, who were there because of funding from HANDS. When queried as to what they were learning, one girl eagerly responded, "We've been learning that we are just as important as boys." A young doctor led us on a tour of his village, where he is working to improve the nutritional level of all the babies. The program exists because of support from Americans like you, who are concerned about the people of the Middle East.

It has been a privilege to work with our 27 different Egyptian partners as well as with the "HANDS family" across the U.S. to build partnerships that bring hope to both of our societies. In addition to the community development efforts that HANDS has participated in for the past 16 years, we are responding to the growing need to develop understanding between the peoples of the West and of the Middle East. Through bi-annual Insight Trips to Egypt, sales of handicrafts made by girls in a HANDS-supported project, educational workshops, and our Egyptian American Dialogue program launched in 2004, we are gradually building a bridge to cross the sea of misunderstanding that separates our two regions.

As you read more about these exciting programs in the following pages, know that much of the credit goes to our last Executive Director, Karen Souryal. Karen was the driving force at HANDS from 1999 to the end of 2004. Our recently awarded USAID grant was applied for under Karen's leadership. The capacity to run this organization with only 12 percent administrative costs is thanks to Karen's management. The Egyptian American Dialogue was also started at her initiative. Although Karen has moved on to pursue other dreams, fortunately for us she is still very active at HANDS as the Treasurer of the Board and as a volunteer consultant.

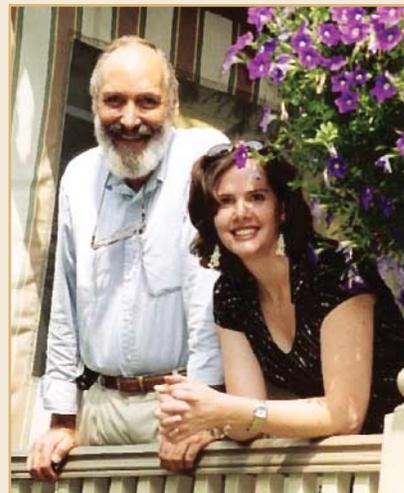

Join us as we look back at 2004. There is much to celebrate and much yet to be done!

EGYPTIAN AMERICAN DIALOGUE

Launched in 2004, the Egyptian American Dialogue is a citizen diplomacy effort that brings together academicians, journalists, civil society leaders, and religious leaders to discuss differences and explore similarities across the two cultures. Local groups, composed of both Americans and Egyptian-Americans, have been discussing such issues as the role of education and the media in creating perceptions of the other culture. The Egyptian American dialogue is about to enter a new phase. We are pleased to announce our first international dialogue, to be held in November 2005, with delegates from Egypt. As participants develop a better understanding of each others' culture and cultivate new friendships, they will initiate joint projects bringing to their sphere of influence a fresh perspective on the other society that ultimately promotes intercultural appreciation and a push for peace.

PROJECT PARTNERSHIPS

Families, individuals, organizations, and congregations throughout the US joined hands in 2004 with our various Egyptian partner organizations to bring sustainable community development to the villages and cities of Egypt. Their support, communication, and in some cases, volunteer work enables Egyptian community development projects to succeed. As the events of the year unfolded, bringing news of increased violence and heightened intercultural tensions, the importance of projects that bring economic and social stability to Egypt was highlighted. The following page describes the various projects with which Americans are able to build partnerships through HANDS.

INSIGHT TRIPS

Reenergizing HANDS' Insight Trip program was a focus in 2004, which involved taking two different groups to Egypt. These adventures allow Americans to explore the history, culture, religions, cuisine, and modern lifestyle of Egyptians. Going beyond the pyramids and ancient bazaar, HANDS' guests have the unique opportunity to dine with local families, dialogue with cultural experts, and offer a hand at local community development projects.

USAID GRANT FUNDS MINIA CLINIC

HANDS is completing negotiations with USAID's American Schools and Hospitals Abroad program on a grant USAID has approved to establish a community-based eye clinic. The clinic will be located in the upper Egyptian governorate of Minia, one of the least developed areas in Egypt. One of the major problems that the clinic will tackle is the prevalence of trachoma, now hyper-endemic in Egypt, especially among women, who are blinded by it two to three times more often than are men. The clinic will be run by the Coptic Evangelical Organization for Social Services (CEOSS), a long-time HANDS partner.

In 2004, Hands Along the Nile received generous support from many individuals and institutions, including those listed here.
